Supporting emerging voices in educational leadership.

Meredith King is part of a team of educators, including Professor Stephen Heppell, Dr Martyn Wild, and Nikki Deighton, who are excited to announce the launch of the Future EduMakers program, designed to support, mentor and guide school leadership teams as they undertake to do things differently. The ACEL ‘New Voice’ Initiative represents a commitment of $300,000 over ten years by ACEL. As part of our ongoing pledge to give back to the profession, we have developed this suite of scholarships to provide world-class learning opportunities to up-and-coming leaders.

In 2016 ACEL will award a total of 20 ‘New Voice’ Scholarships across three categories. Each scholarship aims to welcome the recipients into the ACEL network and support the dissemination of new learning and thought. The recipients will be recognised in public as forward-thinking, relevant and responsive educational leaders by their peers and the wider education community.

Recipients of the ACEL ‘New Voice’ Scholarships will receive:

- Complimentary attendance/participation in the 2016 ACEL National Conference in Melbourne from September 28 – 30, including tickets to the social event/s, valued at $1,000
- A cash bursary of $500
- Featuring of their work in ACEL’s flagship journal, The Australian Educational Leader

Additional opportunities to have their work featured at ACEL Events
